

Concerns and complaints during your studies

TUBAF endeavours to continuously improve its study conditions and services. In order to achieve this, a quality management system for all aspects of study has been established, which reviews all degree programmes on a regular basis. Great importance is attached to the student perspective and this is integrated into the processes. Important feedback instruments in quality management are the student course evaluations and module evaluations as well as other student surveys.

Suggestions, ideas, criticism or complaints from our students are extremely valuable and important in terms of a culture of quality and continuous development. Therefore, please take the opportunity to share your opinions and suggestions for improvement with us.

Please note that there are contact persons and advice options at different organisational levels of TUBAF. Solutions are often found fastest and best where the problems arise. Complaints and concerns should therefore be dealt with as closely as possible to the subject of the discussion. Therefore, please contact the office closest to your complaint or suggestion first (e.g. module coordinators in the case of problems in the module; the dean of studies in the case of problems with the degree programme). The next higher level should only be involved if your suggestion or problem cannot be dealt with at one level.
